The Nitrogen Rule states that if  $m/z$  for M is odd, then the molecular formula must have an odd number of nitrogens. If  $m/z$  for M is even, then the molecular formula must have an even number of nitrogens (this includes 0). EX: For 1-bromopropane,  $m/z$  for M=122. The even number is in accordance with the even number of nitrogens in the formula (zero).

Mass Spectrometry - UCLA

Mass Spectroscopy is a technique causing the formation of the gaseous ions with or without fragmentation; the gas phase ions are then characterized by their mass to charge ratios ( $m/z$ ) and their relative abundances. In MS, compounds are ionized. The ionized molecule often fragments into smaller ions/radicals.

What does  $m/z$  mean? M stands for mass and Z stands for charge number of ions. In mass analysis, an electron is taken from molecules to create single charged ions. If two electrons are removed, double charged ions are produced. The number of electrons removed is the charge number (for positive ions).  $m/z$  represents mass divided by charge number ...
