2 A Guide to Teaching Nonfiction Writing teach nonfiction writing explicitly Nonfiction writing fills our lives. Everywhere we look there are newspapers, magazines, directions, street signs, recipes, letters, maps, menus, e-mails, Internet sites, and so on. As writers, we make lists, craft letters, send e-mails, provide explanations, and jot notes.

A Guide to Teaching Nonfiction Writing - Reading Rockets

Nonfiction writing is made up of components, or parts, that are quite different from those that make up fiction. When we are familiar with the components of both nonfiction and fiction, we can better understand what we are reading. Also, knowing these components helps us organize our own writing when we compose our own stories or factual pieces.

3. Use emotional language. Bad nonfiction pieces are overly factual and prosaic. (Think of the last academic paper you read. Snooze!) They often employ a certain "code" of complex sentence structures and foreign words to make them seem more credible and expert-like. The antidote: use more imagery, more emotion and more personality.
